DR. GIBSON AT REST.

POPULAR TRIBUTE OF LOVE AND RE-SPECT TO THE DEAD PASTOR.

reds Turned Away-Floral Offerings. Bishops and Clergy Present.

PETERSBURG, Va., November 3,-The funeral of Rev. Churchill J. Gibson, D. D., took place this morning from Grace Episcopal church, of which for fifty-one years he had been the honored and beloved rector. From 8 to 10 o'clock the body lay in state in the basement of the church, en-cased in a handsome casket and clothed in his episcopal robes, and between those hours there was a continuous stream of people anxious to obtain a last look at the features which in life had smiled so sweetly upon them and which all remembered so well. The scene was very affecting at times, and there were but few who failed to drop genuine tears of grief over the bier over the loss of a dear friend; of heartfelt sorrow for the calamity sustained by the church for which he had labored so incessantly for over half a century, and yet coupled with inward rejoicing that his labors were at last crowned with the joys of an eternal rest, and glorified by the reward that surely awaits the just man made perfect. In this community, where Dr. Gibson spent the whole of his pastoral life, working in season and ont of season for the spiritual welfare of the people and for the advancement of Christ's kingdom, there is not one who does not say and believe that he is of that blessed number to whom the words of the Saviour will apply: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." in his episcopal robes, and between those UNIVERSAL SORBOW.

UNIVERSAL SORROW.

The sorrow over the death of Dr. Gibson is universal. All denominations, all creeds, all classes feel it and feel it deeply. It is shown in the face of every person one meeta. It was testified to day in the general suspension of business during the hours of the funeral. It was shown in the immense crowd of people that endeavored to gain admittance to the church; it was shown in the sad hearts that filled the beautiful edifice where his familiar form had for so many years stood to preach the glad tidings of salvation, and in the tears shed because of the knowledge that they should see his face no more.

For nearly an hour before the funeral services began the church was crowded and all the standing room was occupied. Many hundreds of people who thought to be on time were turned away from the doors, and felt it a grievance that they could not be permitted to render their humble tribute of respect.

OF ALL DENOMINATIONS.

The clergy of all of the churches in this city were present and within the pulpit railing. And in addition to these were the Episcopal clergy of Richmond and Manchester and the counties adjacentall in sarplice. There were also present Bishop Randolph, of Virginia: Bishop Wingheld, of California, and Bishop Jackson, of Georgia, in their episcopal robes. The clergy of all the sister churches in the city were there, and, with the Episcopal ministers, marched in procession down the asile from the door to the chancel in front of the casket borne by the pall-bearers. The scene was not only impressive, but beautiful in the evidences of Christian love and respect thus shown. The floral tributes were magnificent and generous. It is probable that never before in Petersburg, on such an occasion, was there such a profusion of flowers made up in such tasteful and elegant designs. The casket was not only covered but from door to door of the chancel-railing they were arranged in tiers; the lecturns were covered, and the altar, upon which the wine and the bread had been so often blessed, bore exquisite floral designs, and around its base were piled the tender and loving offerings of friends. There were scores of superb designs of every conceivable make, the handsomest ever seen on such an occasion. The clergy of all of the churches in this

The funeral services were of the simplest character—no addresses, no formal services of the Episcopal Church conducted by Dr. Hains, Dr. Platt, Rev. Mr. Spencer, and prayers by Bishop Randolph. The two hymns selected for the occasion were No. 317: "There is a blessed home beyond the land of woe," and No. 187, "All the saints who from their laborarest." The choir was a very full one and sang with great volume and beauty.

The vestries of the three Episcopal churches in the city, the several brother-bood and St. Andrew organizations, the two days are selected for the occasion which experts of the Agricultural Department have been causing across the river. But the cost of the experiments has THE SERVICES SIMPLE.

bood and St. Andrew organizations, the different church societies all attended in bodies and marched on foot to the ceme-tery. There were sixty-three vehicles in line, and the procession to the grave was the longest ever witnessed here. Many hundreds more of people would have gone o the cemetery if they could have stood AT THE GRAVE.

The ceremonies at the grave were as simple as those at the church, and were conducted by Bishops Randolph, Wingfield, and Jackson.

In the recent enlargement and improvement of Grace church the large and beautiful windows in the rear of the pulpit were so made and arranged as to be converted into memorial windows in honor of Dr. Gibson when death should remove him. This will now be done by the congregation, and they will be a worthy monument.

THE ADAMS-BARNEY WEDDING.

A Brilliant Social Event at Fredericksburg-Reception-Presents-Tour. [Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.] FREDERICKSEURG, Va., November 3.—Miss Belle McInto: the popular and highly esteemed Belle McInto: the popular and highly esteemed daughter of a prain J. W. Rear-End Collision—No One Hurt.

[Special telegram to the Dispatch.]

WYTHEVILLE, VA., November 3.—The engine of the vestibule trait, eastward bound, and the sleeper on the west-bound passenger train, which passed at Wythevilie about 11 o'clock P. M., collided last night but fortunately no one was injured, and the only harm done was to the sleeper, which was considerably disfigured and damaged. The vestibule train generally arrives after the passenger, and the latter awaits its passing on the side track, but hat night the west-bound passenger was some minutes behind time and the vestibule was waiting for it. All the cars were run on the side track except the sleeper, which staved on the main track. Seeing the threatened danger, the brakeman on the rear car pulled the air-brake rope and jumped. The momentum of the other cars dragged the sleeper arross the main track and, together with the sudden stopping, flung it against the engine, Considerable excitement prevailed among the passengers of the two trains for a while when the cause of the sudden shock received became known, but not a brulse had been received.

But the cost of the experiment has been too great in the sacrifice of nerves and comfort to make the plan entirely popular with the wachington people. They stood the noise very well as long as it was confined to the darlight hours, but their patience was exhausted when, after miduight last night, there was a fearful roar that success every house in the city, and brought many people out of bed under the impression that those was an earthquake. It in tervals nicely adjusted to allow the victims opportunity to fail into an unersy map the explosion was repeated, with the result that nobody slept and a slight rain fell.

This morning there was a general expression of indignation at the disturbance. The people at Fort Meyer, who had broken glass shaken upon their heads, were especially wrought up, and yielding to the generally-expressed sentiment, the Major-teneral commanding the army this morning promptly ordered the Agricultural Department experts to vacate the Fort Meyer Reservation. So there will be no further attempts at rain-making on military reservations in and around Washington.

One army officer, who observed the experiments last might because he could not sleep, asserts that the first two shocks brought down smart showers which settled into a steady rain, but that this was addenly stopped by the last two explosiona; so he is puzzied to decide whether or not the acrial bombardiment is a success.

A large number of complaints were to-day made to Assistant-Secretary Willies, of the Agricultural Department, by critizens, who strongly protested against the rain-making experiments being continued during the early hours this morning, and the protestants evidentify were not in a very amiable frame of mind when writing their communications to the Assistant Secretary.
